

Forth Valley Climate Action Hub Seed Grants Empowering Communities for Climate Action 2024/5

As part of our climate hub initiative, we're excited to offer small grants to help communities with their efforts to address climate change through increasing awareness of the issues and local actions.

Background to the Fund

The Scottish Government is funding 20 regional Climate Action Hubs across Scotland. Climate Action Hubs are a ground-breaking initiative from Scottish Government's Net Zero campaign, that puts power into the hands of our communities. They aim to help people understand what is happening to our environment, see how others are making changes that will protect their communities, and be inspired and supported to act themselves.

FEL Scotland, as custodian of the Climate Action Hub for Forth Valley and The Loch Lomond and Trossachs National Park, aims to unite communities and support their response to climate change. Seed Grants are one of the ways FEL is supporting community-led climate action in Forth Valley and The Loch Lomond and Trossachs National Park

Aim of Grants

To provide funds for community-led projects that focus on:

1. Making the community more aware of climate change and its effects
2. Building partnerships between community groups and organisations
3. Helping communities begin to develop their own innovative solutions to climate change
4. Giving communities a stronger voice in advocating for climate action
5. Supporting a shift to a more sustainable and fair future, with a focus on climate justice

Your application must show how your project will meet one or more of these goals.
